Supertyphoon Keith...

The Strongest Ever?

Supertyphoon Keith, which walloped the Mariana Islands north of Guam this weekend, may have been the strongest tropical cyclone on record anywhere on the planet.

But we will probably never know for sure. Keith's minimum central pressure was estimated at 872 millibars according to satellites—which would be lower than record Supertyphoon Tip—but that was just an estimate, as no planes were sent into Keith to take a direct measurement.

At Keith's peak, winds were estimated at 185 mph with gusts to 225 mph.

Halloween at NHS: Stretching the rules?

"The wearing of Halloween hats, costumes, masks, etc. is not permitted. In addition, students are not to have their faces painted." —from the morning announcements

"Overall, everybody's been very compliant. We appreciate that," said Mr. Milardo. He stated that those costumes being worn were "absolutely" within tolerable limits.

Dr. Perlini, who visited NHS during lunch, said that he saw very few costumes being worn.

"Personally, I believe costumes... are for after school hours, not during school hours," he stated.

"And I can see that everyone agrees with me."
